MENU

Hawa Baghdad Restaurant serves a wide variety of dishes, each one telling its own unique story and showcasing the richness of Iraqi cuisine. For breakfast, guests can enjoy traditional favorites like foul medames (mashed fava beans cooked with olive oil, garlic, and lemon) and eggplant baba ghanoush, both of which provide a rich, savory start to the day. Freshly baked samosas, filled with a mixture of spiced vegetables or lamb, are a favorite snack to enjoy with your morning tea or coffee. If you're in the mood for something heartier, try a fluffy khubz (Iraqi flatbread) with a side of kebab or kawaj, slow-cooked meats that have been marinated in a blend of fragrant spices for hours.

For dinner, Hawa Baghdad takes it to the next level with hearty stews and slow-cooked dishes that warm the soul. Try the classic qouzi, a luxurious dish of lamb, rice, and nuts that is seasoned with a blend of spices like cinnamon, allspice, and cardamom. This dish is a true representation of the intricate flavors that characterize Iraqi cuisine—rich, aromatic, and deeply comforting. If you're in the mood for something more exotic, don't miss out on the restaurant's take on dolma, grape leaves stuffed with rice, meat, and herbs, slow-cooked to perfection. Kebab Hindi, marinated beef kebabs served with rice and grilled vegetables, is another must-try for anyone seeking the smoky, tender flavors of Iraq's beloved street food.

What makes dining at Hawa Baghdad even more special is the emphasis on using spices and ingredients that are indigenous to Iraq and the surrounding regions. Sumac, a tangy, reddish-purple spice; pomegranate molasses, which lends a deep, sweet-tart flavor to many dishes; and saffron, known for its bright color and floral taste, are just a few of the signature ingredients that are used to craft the restaurant's menu. These spices and herbs are what give Iraqi cuisine its unique depth and character, and the chefs at Hawa Baghdad expertly balance them to create dishes that are both bold and nuanced in flavor.
